

Lieut. Comdr. Alderman Relates Past Experience

COMMANDED UNIT
AT JACKSON, MISS.

Published Short Stories
In Major Magazines,
Newspapers

Lieut. Comdr. Clifford Alderman, graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland; editor of Our Navy for two years; and most recently head of a V-12 unit at Millsaps College, Jackson, Mississippi, commanding officer of the Naval unit at Middlebury. He assumed his new duties Tuesday, February 29.

Writer for Magazines

Commander Alderman is not only experienced in Navy affairs but is a free lance writer as well. He has written short stories and articles for the Saturday Evening Post, the New Yorker, Atlantic Monthly, Fortune, Argosy, and Every Woman's magazines. The McClure newspaper syndicate has published many of his short stories. This syndicate sends stories to newspapers all over the country.

While at Annapolis, Commander Alderman was on the Navy varsity soccer team and was a member of the Log staff. After his graduation in 1924 he did editorial and public relations work. For two years he was editor of Our Navy which is published twice a week at Brooklyn, N. Y., for the enlisted personnel of the Navy.

In December, 1942, Commander Alderman was recalled by the Navy and sent to Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass., as an instructor of ordnance and gunnery for a Naval R.O.T.C. unit. In June, 1943, he was transferred to Millsaps which is a small co-educational college very similar to Middlebury.

Vacationer at Dunmore

Commander Alderman, coming from Springfield, Mass., knew a great deal about Middlebury College although he had never visited here. He has spent several summers at Lake Dunmore and he thinks that Vermont is the most beautiful state in the Union. The setting of the campus and mountains delight him, and he is looking forward to the coming of spring.

Commander Alderman says that he had a fine group of fellows at Millsaps, and he is looking forward to such a unit here at Middlebury.

Senile Seniors Supported By Canes With A History

By One of the Remnants

Those rickety and enfeebled characters seen hobbling around campus these days with furrowed brows and drooping shoulders are not retired faculty members, but the shattered remnants of the class of '45. The defeated slouch, the dimming eyes behind their newly acquired glasses, the trembling hand-shake and the chronic cough, all betray the senile senior in the last stages of her decay.

Remains

Gone is the blush of youth from those hollow and sunken cheeks; gone the sparkle from many a bloodshot eye; gone the bell-like quality from now hoarse and rasping laughter. Naught remains to the senior but her cane.

Her cane! Oh most oppressive badge of shame—the last devastating reminder that old age has finally and irrevocably set in!

Time was, back in the twenties and thirties, when a senior girl might laugh at her years. Long, hazy summer days of vacation provided nature's rejuvenator, and even an eighth term could be the belle of any ball. Books were dabbled

Three Appointed To Campus Staff

Bertschinger, LaVallee,
Kempf Undertake Duties

Bette Bertschinger '46 and Albert J. LaValle, A.S. have been elected to fill the vacancies of two of the Assistant Business Managers of the CAMPUS. They are replacing Barbara A. Busing '46, who has left Middlebury, and Robert Ehrenbard A.S.

Miss Bertschinger held the office of vice-president of her class last semester. In her college career she has also been active in W.A.A., Forum and Mountain Club. She was a member of the Carnival Ball Committee in '44 and on the Soph Hop Committee in '43.

LaValle has been appointed leader of the sixth platoon. He made himself known as first baseman of the baseball varsity which played in the summer semester. Before joining the Navy, LaValle attended Niagara University.

D. June Kempf '45 has been appointed to the News Staff of the CAMPUS. Among her other activities at college, Miss Kempf has been a member of W.A.A., Mountain Club, S.A.A., and Forum. In connection with the last activity Miss Kempf teaches piano lessons at the Community House. For two years she has been on Dean's list.

in from time to time, to be sure, but not so frequently as to inspire the now-famous "Middlebury squint." Muscles bulged in senior legs from the numerous trips up Chapel Hill, but their faces were indistinguishable from those of the carefree freshmen.

Competition—Then

In 1923, in fact, so popular was the senior class, that an eager member of the men's college, discouraged by the cut-throat competition for one girl's attention, dragged her by the hair from Pearson's Hall to the Campus Theater, and there handcuffed her wrist to his to insure her staying with him.

She sat through the movie quietly enough, but when they rose to leave, they found that another boy had handcuffed himself to her other wrist, a third boy was handcuffed to his wrist, and so on for eighteen boys. This wouldn't have proved catastrophic had not the one and only key to all the handcuffs been swallowed by one nervous lad in the excitement of the movie.

Dr. Weeks Sees Optimistic Future For Class of 1944

Says Technical Vocations
Offer Opportunities
For Women

Degrees were awarded to 97 seniors and graduate students following an address by Dr. Edward Weeks at the commencement exercises held February 22 in Mead Memorial Chapel. Four honorary degrees were also awarded. Lieut. Edward M. Clark awarded certificates to naval trainees.

Dr. Weeks Addresses Graduates

Dr. Weeks, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, talked on his recent visit to American flying fields in England. Although he was realistic about the present war and its tragedies, he made his talk generally optimistic. Before actually visiting the flying fields he visited various factories and munition plants, where he was impressed with the number and efficiency of women workers.

These women who were doing difficult precision work encouraged Doctor Weeks about future vocational opportunities for women. He offered this encouragement to the women who were leaving college. He felt that there would be a wider scope in these opportunities due to the increasing adaptability to jobs previously considered too difficult for them.

Ends Talk Optimistically

Doctor Weeks then went on to describe his experiences with the air squadrons. In speaking of a bomber raid over Germany he described the tension before the flight and the exhaustion following it. He also told of one plane which did not return. Men who were accustomed to facing fear, he thought, would be well equipped to cope with the economic and social stresses in the post-war world. On this optimistic note Doctor Weeks concluded his address.

Dance To Be Held On Saturday Night

Social activities on campus will begin with an informal Senior Class dance Saturday, March 11, to be held at 8.00 p.m. in the college gym. Movies of campus activities will be shown during intermission.

Jean Bender '45 is in charge of the arrangements for the dance and, in conjunction with the battalion commanders, will operate a date bureau for this affair. Chaperones for the dance will be Dr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Holden, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Bruce V. S. Weidner, and Lt. and Mrs. Elmer D. West.

The committee for the dance consists of Jean A. Bender '45, chairman; Wilma R. Bunce '45; Eleanor M. Drake '45; Barbara J. Drury '45; Audrey J. Nunnenmacher '45; Mary J. Snooks '45; and Janet E. Townsend '45.

Heads of Activities To Speak to Navy

The heads of Campus activities will speak to the Navy men at the Navy assembly, Saturday morning, March 11. Such organizations as Mountain Club, the Lodge, CAMPUS, S.A.A., Humanities, College Players and Choir will be represented. The presidents of each of these organizations will speak briefly about the activity which they represent and tell the opportunities for participation by the V-12 students.

Saturday afternoon the Lodge will exhibit posters and displays from organizations who wish to submit them. There will also be representatives from each to answer any questions concerning the activities of their organization.

Vice-president Freeman Opens March Semester

Forum Campaign
For Membership
Begins March 13

Women's Forum will conduct its membership drive the week of March 13. The dues, which are $5.00 a semester, are used for social welfare work in the town of Middlebury.

Agents will be selling membership tickets in each of the girls' dormitories. They are as follows: Forest East, Audrey J. Nunnenmacher '45 and Alice Louise Bull '46; Forest West, Barbara V. Snow '46; Battell Cottage, Margaret J. Rowland '46; Painter, Insley C. Gove '46 and Edith C. Callaghan '46; Le Chateau, Polly Belcher '47, Pearsons, Barbara H. Flink '46 and Nancy Peel '47; Howard House, Elizabeth L. Hurd '46; Hillcrest, Janet Shaw '47; Spanish House, Ruth Strode '45; and Homestead, Margaret B. Hood '46.

The organization meeting will be held Friday, March 17 at 7.15 p.m. in Forest Recreation Hall. At this time the members will meet the officers, hear reports of committees and a talk by Miss Olive Dean, chairman of the community house. After a summary of the various activities of Forum, the members will be able to sign on the activity sheets those activities in which they are interested.

Many are the opportunities for social welfare work offered by the Women's Forum. Much of it centers around the community house. Here students may give lessons in music, dancing, crafts or singing to the children in the town who would not otherwise have the opportunity to learn such skills.

There is also hostess work and the story hour which are a part of the life of the community house. Recently Forum has begun doing case work in the town, giving help to many who need it badly and helping them to help themselves.

FIVE NEW WOMEN ENROLLED HERE

Three freshmen and two transfer students have entered the Women's College this semester. This is the smallest enrollment the college has had since the beginning of the accelerated program last July.

The new students are as follows: Julia M. Boss, term 3, Springfield, Mass.; Virginia Stowell, term 2, New Britain, Conn.; Jeanne N. Arkin, term 1, New York City; Annaliese Koster, term 1, Kew Gardens, N. Y.; Alice H. Neef, term 1, Scarsdale, N. Y.

The Men's College has admitted no new students this semester.

Freshmen

Classes for the third term of the current Middlebury year began on Monday, March 6. In Chapel on that day Vice-President Stephen A. Freeman spoke to the student body and stressed the necessity of beginning to act for the future today.

He spoke to each person in his statement "your future begins today . . . How you use today will determine how you use every day in the term." Doctor Freeman warned of the "manana" spirit, not only in our daily lives, but in our attitude of post-war reconstruction. In conclusion he brought the message to every individual that he should begin to "build the future solidly on today's job well done."

Changes Made

With the opening of the March term, although it is in the middle of the calendar year, several changes have affected Middlebury College. Replacing Lieut. Edward M. Clark as commanding officer of the Naval unit is Lieut. Comdr. Clifford Alderman.

Faculty changes have included the resignation of Miss Catherine Calvert, lecturer in sociology, and the addition of seven new members to the staff. Harold H. Lance, Dartmouth graduate, Allison B. Ellsworth, Middlebury '29, and L. A. Woodward will be lecturers in physics. John W. Holt, Middlebury '41, will be instructor in sociology, and William A. Pierce, University of Vermont '43, will be instructor in mathematics. Lawrence B. Leighton, Bowdoin '25, comes to Middlebury as lecturer in history, and Miss Ruth C. Childs, Middlebury '44, will return to college as assistant in the Department of Geography and Drafting. E. Robert Cornburn, Ph.D., is lecturer in physics until April first when he will return to Bennington College.

Present V-12 Unit

The Navy V-12 unit has increased in size, despite the graduation of a large percentage of the apprentice seamen in February. New freshmen number 236 for the March term.

Many of these freshmen will remain at Middlebury two semesters before entering the V-5 flying program of the Navy. Three men are taking pre-chaplain courses, and the remainder are either basic freshmen, second year deck, or pre med.

Women's Enrollment

Five women's dormitories have been closed this semester due to the decrease in enrollment resulting from the 69 senior women graduating last month. These houses are Eaton, Sanford, Seeley, Hillside and Jewett-Wilcox.

Three freshman women and two transfers are the only additions to the women's student body. There were no new students admitted to the men's college.

Middlebury-Navy Ethics

To the Navy men who are starting out on a new venture the College extends a sincere welcome. Middlebury has passed the stage of experiment in the V-12 program, and now the job of adjustment and orientation rests with you trainees. You can make of Middlebury—its classes and its activities—what you will. The facilities for a profitable term are here; it is up to you to take advantage of them.

During our first semester with the Navy there was a great deal of talk about integrating the College and the training program. We no longer talk about it because the matter of coordination has taken care of itself. The Navy men, who arrived knowing very little about the college, soon found many things open to them. They joined with the civilian students in discussion groups, they enjoyed sessions with us at the Culture Conference, we had fun together at the Winter Carnival, at formals and gym dances. The men who received certificates and left college for Midshipman training were genuinely sorry to go. We know that you will join in our activities as they did.

Perhaps you are wondering how you can become better acquainted with the College and its campus life. First of all, as you have probably noticed, everyone has a friendly "Hi" which will make you feel more at home. That's an old Midd custom that you'll acquire too. At Saturday's Chapel assembly, the heads of extra-curricular organizations will explain their particular functions on campus and you can choose the activities in which you are interested. In the afternoon, there will be an open-house at the "Lodge" where Kaleids and other projects will be on display so that you can discover some more details for yourself. Now that chaperonage arrangements have been completed you can drop in at any time, introduce yourself to the other students, and join a card game or step on to the dance floor. Gym informals, such as the one planned for Saturday night, will give you an opportunity to meet some more of the Midd civilians.

Of course, the greater part of your time will be spent in class, drill, and study periods. You have been impressed with the importance of your job in training to become Naval officers. Middlebury's academic standards are high, but you have been selected because you have proven yourself capable of meeting the requirements. Our college has a purpose, just as a ship, using an appropriate Middlebury analogy, has a destination. Learning, thought, and application constitute the prow of the boat; the pilots are the commanding officers and trainee leaders. There can be no mutiny aboard, for each one must remain loyal to the ideals and standards set by the College. The boat is made of stout timber; the success of the voyage lies in each member of the crew knowing his duties as a sailor. It is up to you to prove that you can learn to handle the course.

Red Cross Call

We all contributed last semester to the Middlebury Community Chest Drive which was announced as the only campaign for funds to be held this year. The money collected was sent to the Vermont War Chest, the American Friends' Service Committee, and the Salvation Army. Another call has come from an organization which was not included in our drive. The Red Cross is conducting a separate nation-wide campaign during the month of March, and we feel that every Middlebury man and woman will want to contribute to this cause. Just as was promised there will be no direct canvassing or solicitation of funds. Instead, contribution boxes will be placed at the sign-out desks in all dormitories, in the book store, in the library, and in Munroe. It is up to the individual to decide whether he thinks that the Red Cross is worthy of his support. We are convinced that it is.

Everyone is well aware of its function as a relief organization in case of natural disaster. The present war has added many more to its list of duties. Field directors stationed at Army and Navy camps here and overseas maintain a liaison between the man in the service and his family. They contribute to morale by handling personal problems of fighting men and women and by conducting social service and recreational programs. In all theatres of action, Red Cross workers accompany the service man no matter where he goes.

At the request of the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy the Red Cross is collecting blood donations to be processed into serum and plasma for wounded fighters. They recruit qualified nurses for wartime service, who take charge of these blood banks and care for soldiers at the front.

Through insular and foreign agencies, relief is extended to prisoners of war and interned civilians in the form of food, clothing, and supplies. Cooperation with the International Red Cross makes possible an extensive inquiry service about persons in war-affected countries.

These are just a few of the vast number of services rendered by the Red Cross in the war. You can see for yourselves that they need financial aid in carrying on their relief activities. Of course you are under no obligation to contribute so far as the College as a whole is concerned. Individual judgment will determine the amount raised for this organization. We feel confident that Middlebury students will respond. —N.M.M. & R.L.C.

Inter-Faith Group Hears First Talk On Denominations

In an effort to bring about an understanding of various religious faiths, the newly-established Inter-Faith Group sponsored the first in a series of talks by representative clergymen Sunday afternoon in the living-room of Pearsons Hall. Rev. Paul B. Maves, pastor of the Middlebury Methodist Church was the speaker.

Choosing as his topic "The History, Philosophy and Theology of Protestantism," Mr. Maves explained that a Protestant has no hard and fast system to present but rather his own point of view.

Development

The speaker traced the development of Protestantism, outlining the types of early Christian churches. "The Christian Church never had from the beginning the unity that people thought it had," he said. Dissension was first brought about by the question whether or not Gentiles should be admitted to the Church on the basis of Jews.

"There was never a unification of language," Mr. Maves continued. "Greek and Latin were both spoken in the early Church. And there were differences of temperament." There was the priestly class, composed of organizers and administrators who carried out the ritual of the Church with pomp and ceremony. There was the prophetic class who were devoted to ethical activity. To them religion was a living force. Some priests combined both the priestly and the prophetic but in most cases there was the fundamental conflict between the two types.

Reformations

The Protestant Reformation was not the first reformation in the Church, the minister explained. First there was the Monastic Reformation brought about by monks who dignified labor, working with their hands. They were also interested in learning.

Secondly, there was the Medieval Reformation. Monks first withdrew from the world and then went out among the people as preaching friars.

Thirdly, there was the complex Protestant Reformation which came in a period of restlessness all over Europe. It was contemporaneous with the rise of capitalists, artisans and the bourgeoisie.

"All three reformations grew out of a desire for purification of the Church through a return to the original purity found in the New Testament ideal.

Classic Types

Reverend Maves then reviewed the four classic types of Protestantism—Lutheranism, Anglicanism, Reform, and Radicalism, summarizing the basic doctrine of each type.

He stressed the four basic insights which evolved from the Protestant Reformation: 1) unmediated grace, or justification by faith; 2) the belief that each individual has direct access to God without mediation of the Church; 3) literalism of the Scriptures, and 4) abolition of Papal monarchy.

"The Reformation brought about a revaluation of common life and the laborer and abolished the distinction between the clergy and the laymen," he declared.

Weaknesses of Church

Turning to the weaknesses of the Reformation he said it unfortunately divided the body of the Christian Church and brought about internal discord. The latter was caused by the individualism of the Protestant faith. Biblical literalism resulted in hard and fast creeds and intellectualism faded due to the stress laid upon faith.

The speaker concluded his talk with a brief summary of the recent liberal trend in Protestantism and the reaction against it.

A question period followed Reverend Maves' talk. Miss Margaret J. Rowland '46, introduced the speaker. Approximately 50 students were in attendance.

Summer Openings In Social Agency

Students To Assist In Camp Placement

The Community Service Society of New York has notified Miss Marion M. Wolcott, vocational counselor, that openings will be available this summer for college undergraduate volunteers in the Family Service district offices of the society.

This work will give college students contemplating social work as a profession an opportunity to get some first hand experience in advance with a qualified social agency.

Volunteer Work

Students who apply for this work must be willing to devote two and a half full days or five half days a week to service in the Volunteer Institute. Round table meetings will be organized for the students but the majority of the time will be spent assisting social workers on the staff with the increased volume of work brought about by the war.

The volunteers, who may come from any undergraduate class, will help to get undernourished children to fresh air camps and will take care of physical exams, camp equipment, etc. Supplementary tasks include visiting schools and getting data from public records.

$85 a Month

A few maintenance-fellowship jobs at $85 a month will be offered to those who have completed the junior year in college. Two months of full time work is required of students who hold these jobs. They will assist the social work staff of the society as case work aides in the Family Service Department.

sale and selling them many students are needed. There are the collecting, sewing, mending, pressing and selling clothes committees, on which the members may give their services.

Among the war services that Forum has undertaken are the selling of war stamps in the dormitories, collecting magazines for soldiers' hospitals and collecting scrap. There is also an opportunity for members to work on the Forum calendar for 1945, which is pictorial calendar specializing in scenes of Middlebury.

S. A. A. Forum

For the discussion side of the organization, Forum has cooperated with S.A.A. so that there will not be a duplication of meetings. This gives the student a chance to express her views on current topics and to learn more about them by leading or attending the sessions.

Co-ed Returning Finds Confusion

BY ONE CONFUSED

Is this a train or a trolley car? Or doesn't the machine age mean anything above the Arctic Circle? Here comes the conductor. Get out your tickets, everyone. What? OH! Middlebury! Ye gods, my stuff is back three cars. Well, if you get a telegram from Burlington don't be too surprised.

When is Mark coming? Gee, I thought it was a crime to get anyone up this early in the morning but now I think it's a federal offense to leave anyone standing on this station so long. Hiya, Jane, nice vacation? No, his furlough was cancelled at the last minute so I just hung around the house. Sure way to get dishpan hands and I've got 'em up to the elbow. Anyone seen my roommate? I lost her getting off the train. There she is, Ann, did you remember to get my boots out of Dolly's room and put them in our new room? Sure, it's a fine time to be worrying about boots. I gotta navigate around this place all day today and look how slushy it is. It's either boots or water-wings . . . I'm too young to drown. HERE COMES MARK. Shall we go up to our new room or the old one? O.K. the old one.

The Shock

My lord, this room is a mess. I'll never find a thing. Well, first I want a shower. Do you remember where I packed my towels? Neither do I. Maybe they are in this box. Oh, look . . . here's that picture from the ski hike. I'd forgotten I had it. Oh, here's that sailor hat we borrowed from Middle night. Gee, didn't I ever return that? How can I get it back to him? Well, he should have it back, I think. Suppose he's torn all his hair out from studying, wouldn't he be cold without it? All right, Ha Ha yourself, if you want the bitter truth, I gotta get rid of it somehow. I certainly don't plan to wear it. What am I looking for, oh! towels. Maybe I put them in this box over here. Gee, I must have packed in my sleep. Probably did. I don't remember a thing from my last exam until Grand Central.

Well, they're not in here. Did I put them with any of your stuff? Well, I'll find them. I have three boxes and two suitcases to go through still. Is that the breakfast bell so soon?

Gee, it seems good to see all the gang again. Hi! How's God's gift to Columbia? Who got a ring? She did! Not Johnny? No stuff.

a freeze-locker, doesn't it? WooooPS First down, gym to go. Look at the line-up. This hasn't happened since I tried to see "Gone With The Wind." Speaking of gone with the wind, I will be soon. Maybe it's March but that's no spring breeze.

Did you get registered? No, I can't find a fifth course. Three of the courses I wanted to take came on Monday at 11:30. Simple, all I do is to go to one Monday, one Wednesday, and one Friday. Then when all the final exams come I write one with my hands, one with my feet, and the third is an oral. Of course, by then I'll be a gibbering idiot . . . Nobody'll know? They certainly will. It'll be an improvement.

No, I'd love to go downtown but I have to go home and unpack. No, I haven't found them yet but I still haven't opened the suitcase.

Navy a la Midd

The new sailors? Well, I've only seen a few but they were on the ball. Wait until they get their uniforms. I love the way they strut around in them. You have a date with one? Gonna get that Midd Spirit, right fast, too. I hope they'll like it. I can't help thinking that anyone who doesn't miss a lot. Yes, I know I chose Middlebury, but gee, I'm not sorry.

Well, if this isn't the pay-off! Do you know what I did with those towels? I sent them to the laundry!

"When you come to the end of a perfect day" it was tomorrow or yesterday. It wasn't today. G'night.

Registration for membership in the Spanish club is to take place from Wednesday until Friday. All those who signed up for membership will elect new officers sometime during the next two weeks.

Just What's Buzzin Cuzzin In Drama Circles and Such

By ELEANOR M. DRAKE '45

Here's a little inside dope on what fun those drama addicts can have in their more idle hours! A comfortable group of Playhouse people got their heads together before vacation and agreed on "where to meet Harry in New York" and "What's to see there," and then they all made solemn promises to be there when. All in all it was a two-day tangle with Joe's bologne, scrambled theatre tickets, and Martha Raye.

First in order was a peek into the Brooks Costume Company. What was to have been a peek became a general survey of a "company in chaos," otherwise known as spring house cleaning. As I understand it, several people almost lost their lives as they tried to escape the personnel manager!

Whirlwind of Shows

Less harrowing among experiences experienced was the trip to Henry Miller's Theatre. Here they sought and found hedge-high Helen Hayes in "Harriet," and there they left her for such other things as "Othello" and "Decision." For personal opinions on these three plays, refer yourself to the Playhouse, where the mob hangs out. Then, not being satisfied with just the finished product, and wanting to see what causes "the tick," the experts bored their way into and through Radio City, barged backstage in a Broadway theatre, and breezed into the National Broadcasting Company to hear all and see all of "Abie's Irish Rose." Along with "A.I.R." they got guidance on the good use of Drene shampoo.

Playbill to Menu

Now we go from playbill to menu, as the gang found it necessary to meet their vitamin requirements. They went to "Nick's" for dinner and that's what they got. They dined in "Village Corners" down Greenwich way, amidst selected servicemen and tired entertainers. Those who found the desire for Chinese food strong patronized a "Chinx," fed their flesh, and discovered that it produced a favorable effect on their souls. And last but not less than least, they put their trust in "Child's."

All this they did in the spirit of good fun, and I'll wager they learned something too. I'm jealous!

As for what's buzzing in the minds and hearts of the "Weybridge Willies" right now, it's this—it's preparation for March 31. I'm steering you right when I say keep that date open. The doings will be big, and you won't want to miss them. Professor Bourcier is directing "The Twelve Pound Look," a one act by Barry to be presented March 31 in the evening. This is to be a faculty feature, with Mr. Bourcier playing the role of Sir Harry, a man to be knighted; Mrs. Holden playing Lady Sims; Mrs. Kaiser playing Kate, and Mr. McFarlane playing Tombes. The set will be the product of the Playhouse paint and canvas, and the ideology and spirit of Mr. Healy and his co-workers. Again, fair warning—don't miss it!

More Yet

Actually, I haven't got the curtain down yet, for on the same evening, and immediately following Mr. Bourcier's production, there will be a presentation of the "Congo." The "Congo" will be interpreted orally by Mr. Volkert, dramatically by the Modern Dance Group, and artistically by Mr. Healy. It promises to stir men's feet, if not their souls.

More of March 31 next week, and don't study too hard—I'm not.

True History Of Seniors' Canes

The twenty of them, then, marched up the hill, routed the sleepy housemother, and marched back down to the locksmith's.

Means of Protection

An emergency faculty meeting was held to discuss methods of protecting the too-popular seniors from such misfortunes. The issuance of a number of twenty-two rifles was discussed, but dropped because women are notoriously poor shots. Rapiers and pistols were likewise discarded. The issuance of canes was finally agreed upon, as a safe and lady-like means of defense.

Today

Time passed, and the old order changed. Little did that ingenious faculty committee foresee the revolution that these changes would wreak. For last Tuesday a most unfortunate thing happened. A senior girl, decrepit and grey, but possessed of the strength that comes from desperation, threatened a small sailor with her cane until he consented to take her to the movies.

We can only hope that with the war's end our tribe of outcasts will come into their own once more.

This is the true story of the Middlebury cane. That Gamaliel Painter stuff is for children.

Midd Skiers In Trophy Race At Lake Placid

Over the week-end of February 22, five Midd girls and a sole member of the Men's Ski-Team participated in the Annual Sno-Bird's Kate Smith Trophy Race at Lake Placid.

The invitation meet was held for both men and women of the United States and Canada. Rhona Whortle and Rhoda Whortle, twins, both of the Penguin Ski Club of Montreal took first and second places in the downhill race on Mt. Whitney. Becky Fraser came in third with a time of 1:32.4 against a winning time of 1:28.4. Polly Hodder came in twelfth in the downhill with a time of 1:47.3. Kelly deLong was eighteenth, Emmy Cushing was twenty-first, and Barbara Boyden, the ski-team manager was twenty-fourth.

In the afternoon, the slalom was held on a slope near Mt. Whitney. The course was set with sixty gates, and both sides of the hill were lined with spectators who had been transported in sleighs from the Lake Placid Club. Paula Kann, of North Conway, won the slalom after placing eighth in the downhill due to a fall. The Whortle twins of Canada were second and fourth. Polly Hodder was ninth, Becky Fraser, thirteenth, Kelly de Long fourteenth, Emmy Cushing, twenty-first, and Barbara Boyden twenty-fourth.

In the combined score, the Canadian women took the meet with first and second place. Becky Fraser was fourth in the combined, Polly Hodder, tenth, Kelly de Long sixteenth, Emmy Cushing, twenty-first, and Barbara Boyden, twenty-fourth.

Bud Smith, who represented the Men's Team came in twenty-second in downhill, and fifth in slalom.

Lodge to Reopen At Sig Ep House

Women are now welcome every day at the Lodge, located at the Sigma Phi Epsilon House which will open this Saturday afternoon, March 11, at 2.30. The Lodge will be open every day except Monday from 2.30 to 5.30 p.m. and from 7.30 p.m. to 9.30 p.m. Saturday nights it will be open until 11.00 p.m. Mrs. John W. Avery is the new hostess.

A drive for members was started Wednesday, membership tickets costing $1. Due to a burst boiler in the Chi Psi fraternity house, the Lodge was moved to the Sigma Phi Epsilon house next door. There will be dancing and other activities as before, and simple refreshments will be sold.

Modern Dancers To Present "Congo"

"Congo" by Vachel Lindsey will come to life at the Playhouse on Friday night March 31. This presentation which is a study of the negro race will be the first dramatic production of the March semester. Modern Dance Club will present it as an interpretation of the poem in dancing.

Under the direction of Mrs. Mary L. Lee and Mrs. Dorothy Madden the Club began work on the "Congo" last semester, but due to illness of the directors, the date of its presentation had to be postponed until March 31.

Nisette D. Van Hemert '45, is in charge of the dancers for the students. There will be student choreographers for each group interpreting the poem, and solo work will be featured.

In order to make the show more effective the choir will sing, as well as Erie T. Volkert, professor of Drama, narrating. Music for the show was written by two Middlebury men, Larry Thompson and Arthur Blake.

Settings are being built under the direction of Arthur K. Healey, artist in residence, and some of the costumes have already been ordered from New York.

American Foreign Policy
Will Be Under Fire
Sunday At 2

American Foreign Policy in occupied countries will be the subject for the fourth radio program sponsored by S.A.A. to be given at 2 o'clock on March 12 over WCAX in Burlington. The speakers will be Ramona Redman '44, Frances M. Horning '45, Carol M. Becker '46, Helen G. Cioffi '46. Miss Becker will review our policy in North Africa; Miss Redman will discuss our policy to date in Italy; Miss Cioffi will give a description of the democratic organizations now operating in Italy; and Miss Horning will discuss possibilities in the shaping of a future policy toward Italy. The talks will be limited to four minutes each, leaving the remainder of the half-hour program free for discussion. Professor Robert W. Rafuse and Mr. Samuel Guarnaccia have advised the students in the preparation of the program.

Future Plays

The present series of broadcasts is the result of a year's work on the part of S.A.A. and includes one discussion by that organization and one program given by some other college group each month. Future plans include a string quartet concert on March 26 under the direction of Mr. Richard N. Warbasse, another discussion on April 9, and a program given by members of the Playhouse on April 23.

The committee in charge of the broadcasts is as follows: Miss Horning, chairman; Barbara P. Abel '45; Carol G. Chamberlayne '45; Miss Cioffi; Joyce W. Locke '46; Judith M. Lyon '46; Jean C. Smith '46.
